Statement of Significance

Built about 1900 as a typical worker's house by Thomas Clark, the house has been owned by several owners throughout the years and had a substantial addition in the rear section added in 1940.

Description of Physical Appearance

Perched above the street on a corner lot, the Clark House is a two-story, Pioneer-style wood frame structure on a later concrete block foundation. The gable roof is covered with composition shingles and has a center gable on the front (south) facade. Walls are clad with drop siding and cornerboards, and fishscale shingles ornament the south gable. Spanning the south facade is a shed-roofed porch with a post and pier foundation with lattice panels, and turned posts spanned by spindlework cornice panels. Windows are tall, narrow double-hung sash with one-over-one lights and plain surrounds. A narrow shed-roofed addition extends from the west wall, and an elongated gable-roofed addition extends to the north.
