Statement of Significance One of the few remaining residential style buildings in the downtown commercial district, the foursquare building was constructed in 1907 by Thomas P. Hollocraft who was an employee of the state printer. The family lived in the house for many years and also operated a boarding house here. The present owners have done a fine job of revitalizing the structure while retaining its historic features.

Description of Physical Appearance This is a square wood frame structure of two-and-one half stories, built in the Foursquare style on a poured concrete foundation. Its bellcast pyramidal roof is covered with composition shingles and broken by hip-roofed dormers on the front (south) and side facades. Walls are clad with drop siding and connerboards, with wide frieze boards below the eaves. Spanning the front facade is a hip-roofed, one-story porch with a low wall supporting tapered Tuscan columns; the porch shelters the main entry door. To the left of the door are double, multi-paned French doors. Fenestration is tall double-hung sash with one-over-one lights, with smaller double-hung sash in the dormers.
